THE ANDRUSTOWN MASSACRE

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian Harriett Geywits

*The following excerpts are from information written by historians
Mrs. Marshal Hatch and Mrs. C. W. Crim
Some descriptions might be difficult to read and understand, but they represent the way of life and death at that time.*

The Town of Warren is located in the southerly portion of Herkimer County, receiving its name in honor of General Joseph Warren who fell at the Battle of Bunker Hill. Originally a part of German Flatts, it was separated in 1796 and originally contained the present Town of Columbia. A small tract was taken from it and added to Stark in 1869.

German settlements were established before the Revolution at Little Lakes, then known as Young’s settlement (now the hamlet of Warren) in the southern portion of the county and also at what was known as Andrustown, located about two miles northeast of the present village of Jordanville. In 1739, Dr. James Henderson of the Royal Army of Great Britain had obtained a grant of six thousand acres, mainly forest. He had wanted the area to be called Hendersontown but the German settlers who came could not pronounce the name and eventually it became Andrustown. “Soon after 1753, seven families purchased one thousand acres lying mostly in the Town of Warren. After taking possession, they began improvements at once. They were Paul Grimm or Crim and his son, Jacob Crim from Pennsylvania; George Starring, son-in-law of Paul Grimm; John Osterhout; Adam Bell who was an aged widower; Frederick Bell, son of Adam Bell and son-in-law of Paul Grim; Stephen Frank; George Hoyer; and Frederick Lepper. These families were of German descent, unable to speak any English. Their cabins were burned during the French and Indian War, rebuilt and again burned at the time of the Revolution.

The population of the settlement increased with the addition of families named Reese, Shafferman, Bulson, Passage and Powers. Powers was an Englishman and adhered to the royal cause, but he made himself so obnoxious to the colonists and they forced him to leave, taking his family to Canada in the spring of 1778.

The other families took refuge at Fort Dayton (Fort Herkimer) nine miles from their homes, for greater safety during the Revolution, returning to their land to harvest their crops. This was when the massacre occurred on July 18, 1778. Powers, a Tory, came from Canada to lead the Indians under Chief Joseph Brant to the slaughter of his former neighbors. The attack is said to have been made for the purpose of plunder as Brant was then collecting a large force at Unadilla and needing provisions, eagerly took this method of replenishing his stock and manpower. Powers was joined by George House from the nearby settlement at Little Lakes. They guided Mohawk Chief Brandt and his warriors to the site of Andrustown where not one family was to escape their tortures.

On that day, the men were in the field hoeing their corn and harvesting their hay. The women living nearest were gathered at a large outdoor oven to bake bread when they were surprised by a band of Indians and Tories. The women were taken prisoners. Seeing the dough that was waiting to go into the oven, it is said that the Indians threw it in the oven and feasted on the baked bread.” What happened to some of the inhabitants of Andrustown?

The Lepper Family – Two of the sons were absent, but all of the family who were at their home were killed.

The Shaffermman (Shaffer) Family – This family was also killed.
The Passage Family – He was killed and his wife and son were taken prisoners. They were rescued at the west side of Schuyler Lake where the Indians were amusing themselves by throwing tomahawks at the little boy who was tied to a tree.

The Bell Family – The accounts of the Bell family do not agree. One version is that Adam Bell, the aged father, was sent by the Indians to get a horse for them. Instead of escaping, he complied, bringing the horse to Brant who said, ‘Such a damned fool is of no use alive!’ Frederick Bell, Sr., was killed as he was taking down his gun from the overhead beams of his house. Tradition says the gun fell in such a manner that it was discharged, killing the invader.

The house was burned. Frederick Bell Jr. was made prisoner and held captive for about ten years. When he was eventually returned to his family, he preferred the ways of the Indians, and he could not seem to adapt to his old life.

The Grimm (Crim) Family – When hearing the war whoops, the family had fled to the swamp. A large tree had been uprooted and made a sort of cave behind the roots and dirt. This was where the wives of Paul Crimm and Jacob Crim hid themselves along with Jacob’s two children. It is told that Mrs. Jacob Crim held her hand so tightly over her daughter’s mouth fearing she might cry and identify their hiding place, that the little girl nearly suffocated. Paul Crim had concealed himself in a great brush pile by the same fallen tree. When one of the intruders jumped up on the fallen tree trunk to get a better view, Crim was said to be able to look into the face and see the feathers of his enemy. Paul Crim had brought his German Bible with him but, as legend says, soon found that he could not carry it as well as one of the children. He left the volume on a stump from where it was recovered the next year. (Currently the Bible is on display at the Herkimer County Historical Society.)

The Frank Family – This family had also fled to the swamp and later made their way to the fort.

The Starring Family – The father was killed in the house and burned with it. The son, Frederick, was shot in the garden as he was climbing the fence to escape. Other members of the family made it to the fort.

The Bulson Family – He was wounded but escaped by hiding in a cave in a ledge of rocks. His wife and child were killed.

The Osterhout Family – John, his wife and two small children had also found refuge in the cave. They later started on their journey to the fort along with Mr., Bulson, each man carrying a child. When they reached the Mohawk River, Mrs. Osterhout, who could not swim, drove a cow into the river and, seizing hold of the animal, was safely ferried across. Hans, a son of Osterhout, was lost and wandered in the forest for three days before reaching the fort.

The Hoyer Family – George Hoyer’s wife and sister had gone to the swamp to fetch some of their previously secreted belongings. When they heard the firing, yells and shrieks of the victims, they remained concealed until night. The intruders ate all the provisions in the Hoyer home and drank the home brewed beer. They took Peter Hoyer as prisoner but did not burn the house. The Hoyer women and Mrs. Bell and one son, Adam, age six, found protection under the cover of darkness to reach Fort Dayton.

The Reese Family – The wife was killed and the remainder of the family taken prisoners.

When the settlers reached Fort Herkimer, members of the Committee of Safety (approximately twenty Americans and seven friendly Indians) formed a rescue party and went to bury the dead and if possible, to overtake the Indians and rescue the prisoners. They were met by a party sent out from Cherry Valley for the same purpose, and together they proceeded to Little Lakes (Young’s Settlement). Young was also a Tory but had not committed any known acts of violence against the country. His settlement, however, had been spared by Brant and his party and, in retaliation for the destruction of Andrustown, the rescue party destroyed the settlement.

While the community of Little Lakes (Warren) was rebuilt in later years, Andrustown never recovered from the attack. A new settlement was formed at Jordanville. The remains of those who once called Andrustown their home, are not forgotten, however. Each year neighbors, residents and descendants gather to honor these pioneers with a commemorative service hosted by the Henderson-Nicholas Herimer Chapter of the DAR.
